B. L. TURNBULL,

Will publish, in the course of a month or six weeks, The Illinois Officer's Guide.

THE publisher has taken great pains in the compilation of this work, to make it one of practical utility—a compendious and correct guide to business men of all denominations—a cheap and legal adviser, by the assistance of which, they can dispense with courts of justice, and the train of evils which grow out of litigation.

The "GUIDE" will be published in a duodecimo form, containing about 400 pages—its contents will be various, but strict utility—such as the declaration of independence—articles of confederation—constitution of the U. States and Illinois—the duties, powers and liabilities of justices of the peace, constables, township trustees, recorders, surveyors, &c. &c. The laws in relation to attachment, trespass, detinue and other common modes of action, a table of officers fees, tax tables, a system of book keeping, interest table. Also, an extensive collection of legal and condensed forms of conveyancing, containing all the necessary "guides" to enable every man to be his own conveyancer.

The laws of naturalization, of pensions, of the patent office, and of claims for compensation, for losses sustained in the Indian expedition of 1832, with other and valuable matter.

The "GUIDE" will be sold by the subscriber at his store in St. Louis, and in the principal stores in Illinois.

The subscriber has also in a course of preparation "A FORM BOOK" for the State of Missouri, on the above plan, which will correspond, with the newly revised code of laws adopted by the legislature of 1834-5.

The price of each of the above works will be $1.50. july 10

MISCELLANY.

THE DISGUISED LOVER.

My friend Tom had a natural affection for dirt, or rather dirt had an affection for Tom. It is to him what gold was to Midras; whatever he touches turns to dirt. No matter how white the cravat—no matter how immaculate the vest, the moment it comes within the sphere of Tom's influence, its whiteness is gone; it is immaculate no longer. Dogs, sweeps, and lamp-lighters never pass him without leaving upon his breast unequivocal marks of their presence. Once, and once only, I saw him cross the street without encountering the wheels of a carriage, I opened my mouth to congratulate, and before I could utter one word, it was filled with mud. The careless blockhead lay at my feet, full length, in the gutter. At my earnest solicitations, he once purchased a suit precisely mud color. It was a capital idea. He crossed the street three times, he walked half a mile, and returned, in appearance at least, unscathed. The thing was unprecedented. True, he was welcomed by the affectionate caresses of a dog that had been enjoying the coolness of a neighboring horse-pond; true he received a shower bath from the wheels of an omnibus. But to plaster mud on Tom's new coat, was to gild refined gold—to paint the lily, I said as I witnessed the success of my plan.

In about half an hour, it was my fate to meet a gentleman with seven stripes of green paint on his back—it was friend Tom; he had been leaning against some newly painted window blind.

His man Cesar, declares that he can't see de use of brack a boot when he never stay bracked, and his washerwoman, with a proper regard for her own reputation, has been compelled to discard him, not from any illwill, but, as she declared with uplifted hands, if any one should ask me if I washed Mr. Smith's clothes, what could I tell them!—But there were very few things in this world with which Tom could have more easily dispensed, than the services of his washerwoman.

Having no other amusement, one morning I strolled over to Tom's room. As I ascended the stairs, I heard his voice in a very decided tone, "but it must be done, and so there is an end of it."

"Really," was the reply, "any thing within the limits of possibility, but to make a coat in ten hours—I will promise any thing in the world, but I really fear I shall not be able to perform."

"If double your price would be any object

"Certainly, sir, if you insist upon it; certainly. I will put every man in my shop upon it; it shall be done in time—Good morning sir."

The door opened, and a fellow with shears and measures passed out. What should Tom be doing with a tailor?

"Just the man I wanted to see," he exclaimed. "I require your advice upon a very important affair; which of these cravats do you think most becoming?" and he spread before me some half dozen of every hue and fashion.

"Now, what in the name of all that is wonderful, does this mean, Tom? A fancy ball, is it? You have chosen an excellent disguise; your nearest friends will not know you. But you cannot support that character; if you had taken that of a chimney sweep, now; but that would have been too natural. Tell me, truly Tom, what does all this mean?"

"Why, the fact is, Frank," passing a hand through his hair, redolent with Macassar, "I have concluded—I think I shall be a little more neat in future. You, doubtless, remember, the good advice you gave me some time since; it has an excellent effect, I assure you."

Now, it so happened, that of all the good advice I had ever given Tom, this was the first instance in which he had seen fit to follow it. So I could not attribute the metamorphosis of my old friend, to my eloquence. Who but a woman could ever change him from a sloven to a fop.

"Pray, where are you going this evening?" I continued, "that you must have a new coat so suddenly."

"Going! no where in particular, I had, indeed, some idea of calling on my old friend, Mr. Murray; no harm that, I hope."

Conviction began to flash upon me.

"Your old friend, Mr. Murray; and his young niece, Miss Julia, has no share in your visit, I suppose? I heard that she arrived in town last night."

"Now, upon my word, Frank, you mistake me entirely—when I—that is, when I—I did not know any thing about it."

"And so you were there last night, too!—Really this is getting along bravely."

"Why, the fact is, Frank, you must know every thing. I called last evening to see Murray on some business, about the real estate you know. I had no more idea of meeting a woman than a boa constrictor; my beard was three days old; and my collar ditto; and the rest of my dress in excellent keeping. I became engaged in conversation, and some how or other I forgot all about the real estate."

"And so you are going to-night—and that is the secret of your new coat?"

"By no means; I wanted a new coat, and tailors are always so long, you know. Do you think blue will become me? Blue is her favorite—that is—I mean blue."

"Oh, go on—don't stammer—blue is her favorite color, is it."

"The fact is, Frank—take another glass of this wine—the fact is, I suppose—I rather fancy—I am a little in love. Try some of that sherry. What are the symptoms, Frank—queer feeling about the heart, and something which drives the blood through one like lightning!"

"Exactly! I believe I have seen Julia, short and chubby, isn't she—with red hair, and a little squint eyed?"

"Frank, I never did knock you down, though I have been tempted to do so a great many times; but, if you don't stop your nonsense, I will."

"Quite valiant in defence of your lady-love—Well, Tom, I will confess that she is a lovely girl, and to-morrow, I will call and learn your success. So, good morning."

"Well, Tom, what success?"

"Would you believe it! she did not recognise me."

"Not recognise you?"

"No. You know what a quiz that Murray is. As soon as he saw me enter, dressed in such style, he came up, shook hands with me, and without giving me a chance to say a word, introduced me to Julia, as Mr. Frederick Somebody. And would you believe it. The witch did not know me. I think I should not forget her so easily. Nor was that all. Murray said something about the fellow who called the previous evening—a country cousin, he said, clever enough, but an incorrigible sloven. And Julia said, he prosed like a barbarian. Just think of that Frank, a barbarian. She shall pay for that yet. Such eyes—and she steps like a queen. Well, Frank, a clean collar does make a vast difference to a man's appearance. Lovely as Hebe herself. Terrible difference clean linen makes."

The last time I saw Tom, he was scolding his eldest son for coming into the drawing room with muddy boots.

Horrid Piracies and Murder.—Singapore papers of the 18th April had been received at Boston, among the extracts from which, are several accounts of piracies committed in that region, which equal in atrocity and cruelty the most infernal barbarities ever perpetrated on the seas, of which we have ever read. In one case 27 Chinese were butchered; in another, the entire crew of a vessel, the number of which could not be ascertained, were slaughtered or drowned; in another, thirty of the crew of a junk, after a desperate conflict of two days, were captured and put to death—two making their escape by leaping overboard; and in another, the crew of a small cargo boat five in number, were cut almost to mince meat. An account is also given in a Singapore paper of the 18th, of an attack, on that morning, on the Rev. Messrs. Dean and Jones whilst on their way to Kashmir, in which they barely escaped with their lives, not without wounds and injuries.

Goods of Life.—The greatest pleasure of life is love; the greatest treasure is contentment, the greatest possession is health; the greatest ease is sleep; and the greatest medicine is a true friend.

[Sir William Temple.

A learned character.—"Give me Venice Preserved," said a gentleman last week, on going to a celebrated bookseller at the West End. "We don't sell preserves," said an apprentice lately imported from the country, "but you will get them next door at Mr. Brown's the chemists."
